

LIVE WEBINAR & FOLLOW-UP

This is the campaign that we have used to fill our webinars to capacity, over and over again, and convert subscribers into sales.

It's broken into three parts:

Part 1: The 'Invite Sequence' - The first job of this campaign is to get your subscribers to register for the webinar in the first place. We recommend a series of 7 emails, sent over 4 days. Typically, promoting a webinar for any longer than 4 days is challenging, as people who register earlier than that will have lost their motivation and excitement for the webinar.

Part 2: The 'Show-Up Sequence' - Once your subscribers have registered for the webinar, take them out of the 'Invite Sequence' and drop them into the 'Show-Up Sequence'. This is designed to get as many people as possible to actually attend the webinar live.

Part 3: The 'After-Show Sequence' - Once the webinar is over, you'll want to send out a series of emails to convert more sales. Many marketers find that they make just as much money from the replay than the live webinar. If your webinar platform allows you to do it, you can actually segment your registrants into three categories, and send them different follow-up series:

- a. People who attended the webinar and saw at least 50% - They should have seen enough content to send them directly into the sales pitch.
- b. People who attended the webinar but left before 50% - They probably didn't seen enough content and need to see the full replay.
- c. People who didn't attend the webinar - They haven't seen anything, so we need to send them into the full replay.

Our 'After-Show Sequences' run for the 48 hours following the webinar and are designed to push sales into the program.

Phew, that's quite a lot of emails! Don't worry though, we're giving you all of the templates you need.

You can use this campaign with live, automated or hybrid webinars - you'll just need to adapt them to suit and, of course, never claim that the webinar is live if it isn't really. If you're doing automated webinars, just delete the word 'live'.

Note: If you want to get best results from this, we'd suggest creating 3 short videos and uploading each one to its own page.

Video 01 - A short recap of what you're going to teach on the webinar, sent to registrants, to get them excited about why they registered in the first place. Approx. time: 3 minutes.

Video 02 - A 'teaching' video, where you share a simple lesson that will overcome a misconception or objection they might have which would stop them from attending the webinar (Approx. time: 6-8 minutes).

Video 03 - A 'teaching' video, where you share a simple lesson that will overcome a common objection that they are likely to have that will stop them from joining your paid program. This video can have a button to the sales/page or order form underneath it (Approx. time: 8-12 minutes).

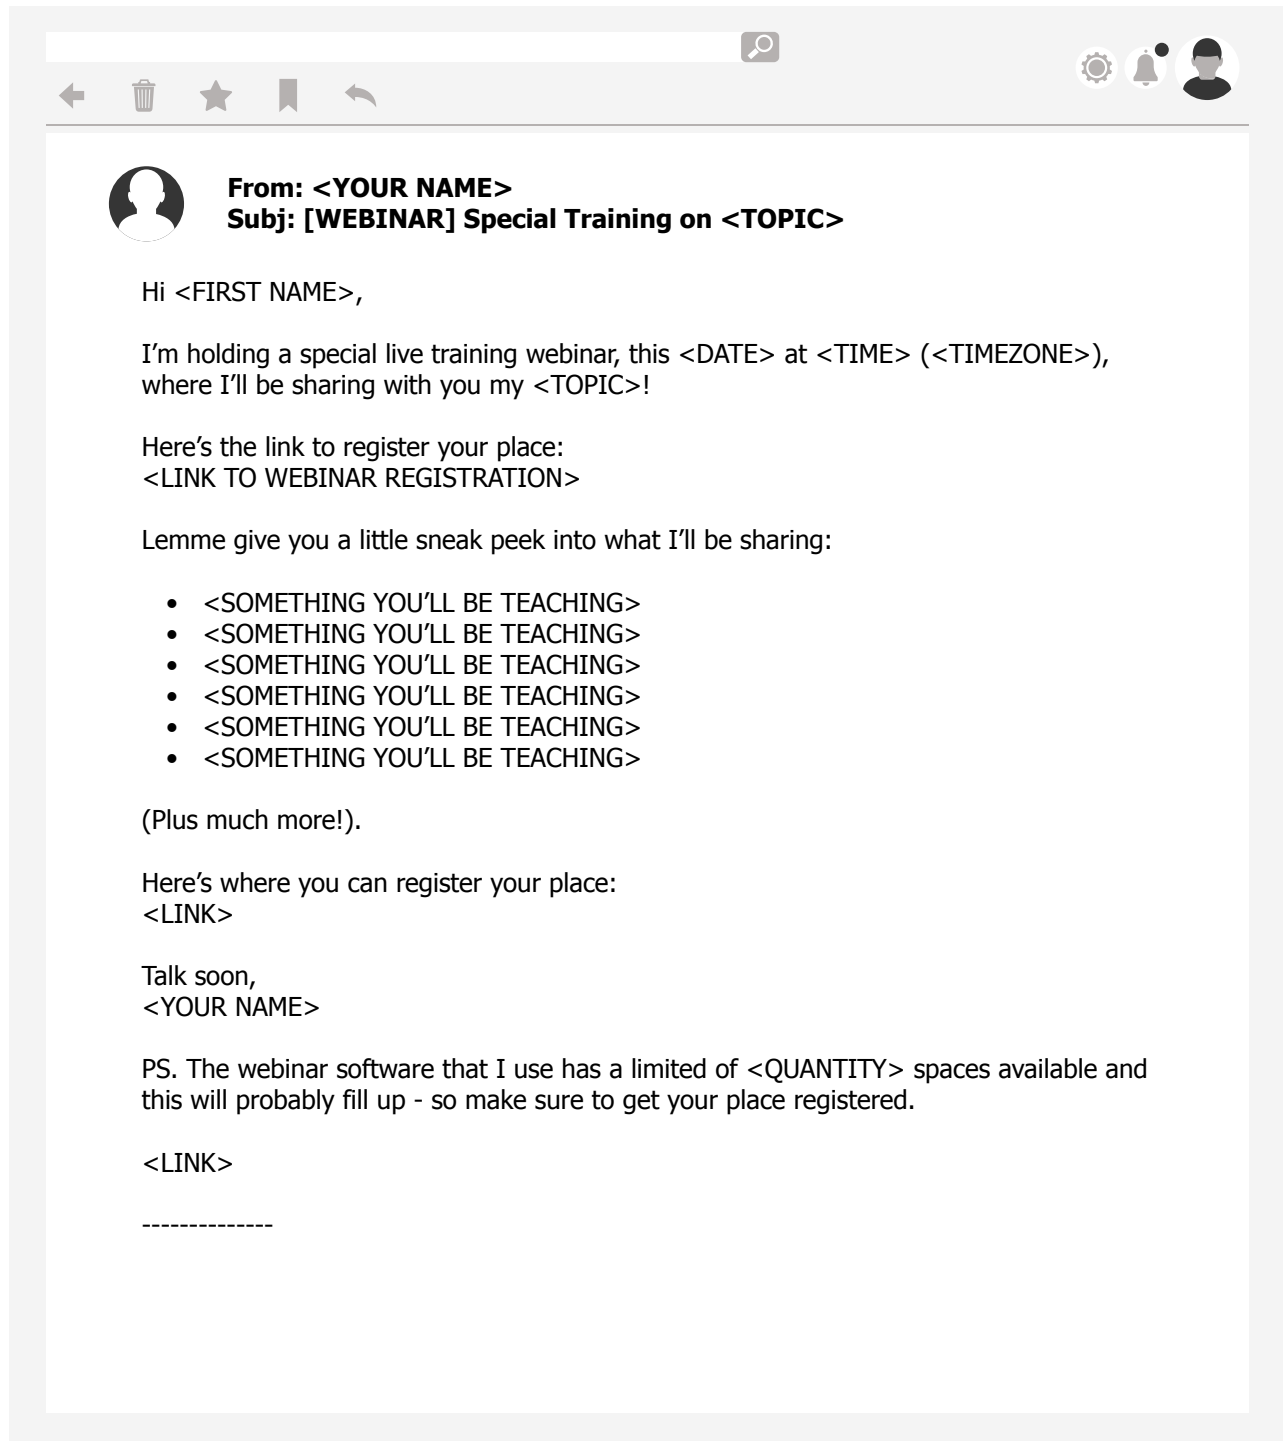

You'll see where these videos fit as you work through the email campaign.

On the right side, there are icons for settings, a notification bell, and a user profile. The main content area contains an email with a sender's profile picture, a 'From' field with the name '<YOUR NAME>', and a 'Subject' field with the text 'The special <BIG CLAIM> case study!'. The body of the email is a persuasive message about a case study, using various placeholders like '<FIRST NAME>', '<CASE STUDY NAME>', '<CITY>', '<BIG PROBLEM>', '<BIG RESULT>', and '<BIG EFFORT>' to represent personalized content. It includes a call to action with a placeholder for a link to a summary sales page and a closing line 'PS. This is closing down at <TIME> tomorrow, so time really is of the essence. See you on the 'inside' :)'. The email ends with another link placeholder and a dashed line.

All it took was a little focus and attention, following the right system.

It's actually the exact same system that I want to share with you in my <PROGRAM NAME>.
And the doors are open right now to enrol in the program, but it all closes in just 24 hours from now.
